Beaver Island welcomes the Michigan Outdoor Writer's Association, who at this writing, are absorbing the lore of the Islands and trying their hand at bass, pike and trout fishing. The group, consisting of around sixty, are being housed at Central Michigan University facilities with the overflow going to Beaver Lodge and motel units here. This annual meeting of the Outdoor Writer's is held in a different location each year. This year Beaver Island has the honor of playing host from June 11th to 14th.

Original planning of this meeting was formulated by Mr. Charles Welch, Regional Conservation Department Director, who is co-chairman for the MOWA with Mr. Gregg Smith, owner of the Boyne Citizen in Boyne City. Mr. Howard Sommers of Central Michigan University, is working with Mr. Welch and Mr. Smith. We feel certain the MOWA will find the Beaver's an interesting and enjoyable place and hope they will return many times.

Friday, June 12th the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce will host the Outdoor Writer's at a cocktail party on the Island. Saturday, June 13th, the MOWA will be the guests of the Beaver Island Civic Association Game Club at a cocktail party, before their banquet.

A brief business meeting will be held on Sunday morning at which new officers will be elected. Mr. Len Barnes, editor of the Automobile Club's magazine "Motor News" is the present President of the group.

A highlight of the meeting on Beaver Island will be an address by Ralph McMullen, the new Conservation Department Director. The Outdoor Writer's will depart on the Beaver Islander at 2:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon.

We are delighted that you choose Beaver Island for your meeting and do come again, soon.
The pulse of Beaver Island has quickened as the summer season gets under way once again. More and more summer cabins are being occupied, pleasure boats are beginning to arrive and the Beaver Islander's complement of passengers is growing with each day.

"BIG ART"

From the homestead cabin of Egedius and Christina Larsen, on Garden Island, the healthy cries of a new born son could be heard. Arthur Larsen came into the world on the 30th day of January in 1898. Garden Island, in those days, was a busy little Community all of its own, with a school, church, post office, store and dotted with homestead and net sheds of commercial fishermen. Being born to the sea, young Art found the feel of a deck under his feet much to his liking, so handling his father's boat almost went hand in hand with learning to walk.

Their closest neighbor was Uncle Pete Jensen, who had several sons, who with Art, kept the two households rollicking with activity. Fishing was big business and Art's father was doing well, bringing in huge catches of Lake Trout and Whitefish. In 1906, the family moved to Beaver Island and built a fine new home on the harbor of St. James. At an early age, Art began fishing with his father, and each day learned just a little more. Each trip out was a new lesson, whether it was learning the habits of fish, the way the boat handled in a particular sea or what the clouds predicted the weather to be the next day.

As the years rolled by it seemed as though Art would never stop growing, for soon he was head and shoulders over most men and was soon dubbed "Big Art". Although of a gentle nature, one of his cousins relates, "nobody gave Big Art any siss".

Art's mother died in 1913, and he continued to work with his father until his death in 1923. Both are buried on Garden Island. His bachelor days ended after meeting Sybil Tilley of Beaver Island. Art and Sybil were married in Charlevoix in 1918.

The fishing industry remained good until the terrible storm of Armistice Day in 1940, when so many lives were lost on the Great Lakes. Art lost nearly seven thousand dollars worth of nets and his big diesel tug, the Estonia, broke her moorings and went high and dry on the beach. This seemed to be the turning point in Great Lakes fishing as many had lost expensive equipment and the Trout were getting scarce. Though fishing was in his blood, Art sailed as Diesel Engineer on boats plying the northern waters, such as the White Swan and the North Shore. Being an ingenious mechanic, it has been said "Big Art" could make a diesel run on soft coal if he had to.

This colorful life came to an end June 3rd, 1964, after a years illness. Arthur Larsen, "Big Art", was laid to rest in St. James Township Cemetery on the 6th of June.
