REMEMBERING MAMA

Mama as a baby examining her toes
Mama on a bearskin rug without a stitch of clothes.

Mama as a toddler with a wagon on a string
Mama looking pensive just sitting on a swing.

Mama going off to school with pigtails and a bow
Mama as a graduate, all smiling and aglow.

Mama growing up and just as pretty as could be
Mama getting married in a gown of organdy.

Mama with the first born child to occupy the nest
Mama holds him gently against her loving breast.

Mama and the rest of us who came along so fast
Mama and the five of us -- with me the very last.

Mama looking older now, but still her smile is there
Mama with her mending in a big, old-fashioned chair.

Mama with our little ones surrounding her with love
Mama just before she left to join the Lord above.

Mama's Album -- full of Mama and her special days
Is all we have to keep her close to us always.

So every Mother's Day we take the book down from the shelf
And let each picture come alive till Mama's there herself!

Alice E. Chase
The remnants of winter are still persistent in shaded areas of the woods and ice conditions in Lake Michigan have even held up several runs of the Beaver Islander. However, Spring too is persistent, for grasses are now turning green and crocuses are raising as to declare Spring is surely here. Now, all we need is some nice warm weather to go along with it.

SPRINT CLEAN-UP: April 17th marked the date for the annual roadside clean-up sponsored by the Beaver Island Civic Association. Volunteers with trucks and many school children turned out for the task. Snow was still a hazard but regardless, several truck loads of cans and debris were carted off to the dump. The only disheartening thing about the project was the appearance of many more cans that were dumped along the roads the following night. Obviously not everyone is interested in cleaning up the island yet, but hopes are high that these conditions can be remedied in the future.

BUILDING BEE: Early in April several volunteers turned out to construct eight picnic tables for St. James township. These tables will be distributed in appropriate areas in the township, such as the Yacht Dock and Township Park. Starting at 1:00 p.m., the tables were complete and painted by 5:00 p.m.. A feat proving that many hands make light work.

FUTURE FIREMEN: The island has indeed been fortunate in recent years not to have had a significant number of fires. To avoid becoming "rusty"and to introduce the equipment to more people, a demonstration was held at the Beaver Islander dock, Sunday, April 11th. Most of the high school boys were taught how to operate the engine pump and took turns handling the adjustable nozzles. They were also versed in the use of the rescue breathing apparatus. Equipment of the D.N.R. was also demonstrated. This demonstration was headed by "Bud" Mc Donough and Bill Wagner.

NEW NAME: The refreshment stand and miniature golf course by the Museum has been sold and will be under new management this summer.
